Information Disclosure Statement

The information disclosure statement filed on 7/19/2004 fails to comply with 37 CFR 1.98(a)(2), which requires a legible copy of each cited foreign patent document; each non-patent literature publication or that portion which caused it to be listed in that no copy of German DE199 49 918 has been provided. Therefore, the citation of this reference has not been considered by the Examiner.

Claim Objections

Claim 9 is objected to because of the following informalities: This claim is informal because the term "according to the above claim" in line 1 renders the claim potentially unclear as to its dependency. It is suggested that the claim be amended to recite "according to claim 8". Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 2, 4-9 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Japanese patent No 361213735A (Japanese'735A). Japanese'735A teaches a device and method for the measurement of the temperature of molten metal, in the partial English language translation for example, including a measuring device (figure 1) for generating measurement data, which is thrown into a molten metal melt from a "drop station" (which limitation absent any further description would be fairly met by any location from which the device is inserted into the melt, and which could be magazined at said drop station (again this limitation does not require said "magazining", but only the ability to be "magazined") and where the device floats at least partially above the slag layer with a transmission antenna (the transmitter 3) both coated (by housing 5) and above the slag layer which transmits the detected data by radio (wireless means) to a processing device, thereby showing all aspects of the above claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Japanese'735A.

As applied to claim 1 above, Japanese'735A shows all aspects of the above claim except the specific provision that the method be carried out automatically. However, the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made because it has been well settled that it would have been a modification obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to automate a process shown by the applied prior art to be carried out manually. See MPEP 2144.04 III and In re Venner, 120 USPQ 193. In the instant case, it would have been a modification obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to broadly automate the manual insertion of the measuring device of Japanese'735A.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Each of Mansfield'755, Mansfield'197 and Plessers et al are also cited as further examples of prior art wireless detectors.
